

RevOps to CRO Is a Real Path

You don't have to skip the AE chair. In fact, you probably shouldn't.

01

Spend 18–24 months in a customer-facing seat

AE, SAM, CSM — pick one. Long enough to own a full cycle. Short enough to come back before you're typecast.

Things no dashboard can teach you

- 01 How a deal actually moves from stage to stage
 - 02 What a buyer cares about vs. what your CRM thinks they care about
 - 03 Where forecast slips really come from
 - 04 Why reps push back on the process you designed
 - 05 How fast a quarter disappears when you're carrying it

MONTHS AS A STRATEGIC ACCOUNT MANAGER

Took a SAM role at a software org with one goal: learn the product, learn the customer base, then go back to leadership.

Go carry the bag. Then come back and lead.

The CROs I trust most have all sat in the seat they're now coaching.
